EVERGREEN CEMETERY'S CONFEDERATE CIRCLE

The Confederate Circle is a mass grave containing the remains of some 2000 Confederate soldiers killed during the Battle of Stones River at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, December 31, 1862 to January 2, 1863. Each side suffered horrific losses. Of the 43,000 Union troops that fought, 13,000 were killed or wounded. Confederate forces numbered almost 38,000 and lost nearly 10,000 killed or wounded.

Two thousand of the southern dead were originally buried in what later became known as the Old Confederate Cemetery. It was located one and one-half miles south of downtown Murfreesboro close to the present-day Samsonite Manufacturing plant and the telephone substation.

According to the December 7, 1867, issue of the MURFREESBORO MONITOR, 2,000 bodies were removed and reinterred at the Confederate Circle in Evergreen Cemetery, located on what is now called Greenland Drive. In the January 28, 1882, issue of the NASHVILLE BANNER, a list was published of soldiers whose names appeared on wooden markers in the Confederate Circle.

The following is the list of the available names. The reader can obviously tell not all of the names of the 2000 dead were recorded and/or preserved.

A copy of the following letter was received from Mr. Robert W. Headrick of Lancaster, Texas. According to Mr. Headrick, his great, great-grandfather, Nathaniel Lynn Douglas, to whom the letter is addressed, came to Texas in 1848 from Murfreesboro and settled in Ellis County, which is just south of Dallas. He, his wife, Mary Goodloe Douglas and many other family members are buried in a family cemetery on the original 640 acres where they settled. The original letter is in a bank vault in Abilene, Texas.

Special thanks to Mr. Headrick and his brother, Dr. Edwin B. Headrick, for making this very interesting material available to our Society.

THE BEECH GROVE CONFEDERATE CEMETERY

by
Shirley Farris Jones

High atop a hill, with the Confederate battle flag flying proudly in the breeze, nestled between the hustle and bustle of busy Interstate 24 and U.S. 41 just about halfway between Murfreesboro and Manchester, is the first Confederate cemetery to be established after the War Between the States. It also holds the distinction of being the final resting place for 50 unknown Confederate soldiers who were killed at the Battle of Hoover's Gap where Spencer Repeating Rifles were first used by Union troops. Despite the changing character of surrounding lands evolving into twenty-first century icons, the integrity of this small cemetery, and the tranquility of that place in time, still exists today.

The following is a letter published in the Manchester Times newspaper in 1904 by Civil War veteran and former resident of Beech Grove, William Hume, which tells the story of how the cemetery came into being:

Dear Friend and Comrade:

As you are aware, nearly every man able to bear arms in the First, Second, and Third Districts of Coffee County, and in the adjoining districts of Rutherford and Bedford Counties, was in the Confederate Army, and made the best of soldiers.

In the spring of 1866 quite a number assembled at Beech Grove, and reports were made that many Confederate soldiers had been hastily buried in the fields and pastures nearby, and in some instances the graves were so shallow that portions of the remains were showing. These men all having lately returned to their homes—with fences and stock to a great extent destroyed or stolen and the country devastated—at once agreed to have all these bodies of Confederate soldiers taken up and given a suitable resting place. They selected the top of the hill in the old grave yard on the Manchester Pike, near the Rutherford County line, and in full view of the Manchester Pike, on the land owned by David Lawrence, had a nice walnut coffin made for each and re-interred there, putting head-boards on each grave, but being unable to put any name, as all were unknown. They also put a nice paling fence around the graves.

This was done by the people there at their own expense, never having called on any other section for help, and was the first Confederate Soldiers' graveyard in the South that I have any knowledge of.

The majority of these veterans and their fathers who did this work are dead. Possibly Stokley Jacobs, Bud Jacobs, and Henry Wivins could give you some information in regard to this.

I think it is due your country to have this honor, as it was done at a time when the Confederate soldier did not occupy the position in the State of Tennessee and the United States that he does today, and was entirely the work of love for fallen comrades.

Yours,

Wm Hume

Manchester Times
March 25, 1904

At the time this cemetery was chosen as the final resting place for these fifty unknown Confederate soldiers, there were a few family graves, including one Revolutionary War soldier, on the site. In 1942, one other Confederate veteran was buried there. For many years it was cared for by local residents and former veterans. Despite their efforts, it fell into a state of disrepair and vandalism became a problem. Then in the early 1950's, $5,000 in state money was appropriated to replace the deteriorating and missing original grave markers. Through the efforts of the late David Jacobs, a retired educator and historian, and with the help of the Sons of the Confederate Veterans, an additional $5,000 was raised. The land was purchased and the cemetery dedicated in 1955. Mr. Jacobs was its caretaker until his death in 1993. In 1994, Ronald T. Clemmons was appointed by the Coffee County Commission as the official administrator of the cemetery.

How strategic was the battle that left more than 200 Southern casualties dead or wounded on top of the blood-soaked farm land in and near Hoover's Gap that sits at the meeting points of Coffee, Rutherford and Bedford counties near the unincorporated rural community of Beech Grove?

Historically, the Battle of Beech Grove (or Hoover's Gap) was a significant engagement in the Tullahoma campaign, following on the heels of the major Battle of Stones River 6 months prior. Over-all, Confederate forces were outnumbered ten to one. And if there were not enough odds against them when they came into battle armed with slow-firing musket rifles, they also held the unfortunate distinction of being the first soldiers in warfare history to be fired upon by the Spencer repeating rifles. Nearly one fourth of the brave Confederate forces defending Hoover's Gap were either killed or wounded, as compared to only fifty-one Union casualties.

At a Memorial Day Service sponsored by both the UDC and SCV in June of 1995, Mr. Clemmons pledged to the fifty unknown Confederate dead: "They shall remain nameless, and they shall remain faceless, but they shall not be forgotten."

THE BATTLE AT HOOVER'S GAP

Shirley Farris Jones

Following the Battle of Stones River on December 31, 1862-January 2, 1863, the Army of Tennessee, under the command of General Braxton Bragg, retreated some twenty miles south of Murfreesboro and constructed extensive fortifications along the Duck River at Shelbyville and Wartrace. Entrenched behind both natural and man-made barriers, Bragg and his 47,000 Confederates hoped to prevent the Federal army from controlling Middle Tennessee and reaching their ultimate objective, Chattanooga, one of the South's most important railroad centers and the gateway into East Tennessee and Alabama.

During the six month period January-June 1863, there was virtually no military activity between the two opposing forces. The fighting that had occurred was by Confederate cavalry under Forrest, Wheeler, and Morgan. The Confederate cavalry outnumbered Union cavalry by more than 7,000 men and was at that time the toughest, most effective, and most ably led body of troops on either side. Union General William S. Rosecrans concerned himself with the construction of a huge earthen fort and supply depot on the outskirts of Murfreesboro, which he named Fortress Rosecrans, and despite urging from Washington and his superiors, was in no hurry to attack Confederate strong positions, using the excuses of inadequate cavalry and the need for reinforcements. Even General Grant's insistence of some military effort in middle Tennessee was ignored, with Rosecrans stating the possibility of Grant losing at Vicksburg. Obviously, Rosecrans was not eager to face the immense tactical and strategic problems which awaited the Army of the Cumberland along the Confederate defensive line, running from Shelbyville to Wartrace to Tullahoma to McMinnville. Bragg had placed one corps at Shelbyville under the command of General Leonidas Polk on his left, and the other corps at Wartrace on his right was under the command of General William J. Hardee. General Joseph Wheeler's cavalry corps guarded the extreme right flank at McMinnville, while General Nathan Bedford Forrest covered the extreme left at Columbia. The ridge north of the Confederate position on the Duck River presented a very serious barrier to any southward advance on Tullahoma by the Federals and could only be penetrated through a series of four passes, west to east, Guy's Gap, Bell Buckle Gap, Liberty Gap, and Hoover's Gap. Polk posted a strong advance force to hold Guy's Gap, with the rest of his corps within supporting distance at Shelbyville, thought to be the likely target. Hardee's men were assigned to hold the other three gaps, Hoover's Gap being the most important with the Murfreesboro-Manchester turnpike passing through it.

In May, Rosecrans knew that Bragg's army had been weakened by detachments having been sent to aid the Vicksburg Campaign, 11,300 men in all (9,300 infantry and 2,000 cavalry). And then on June 13, General John Hunt Morgan and his 2,500 cavalymen rode out on what was to be the "Great Ohio Raid". The time was now right for Union forces to move so on June 24, Rosecrans' army of 50,000 men began its advance on Tullahoma. Rosecrans very cleverly attempted to deceive Bragg from seeing the drive on Manchester as the main Union objective and sent troops to Shelbyville as a devious maneuver. The goal was the capture of Hoover's Gap, then Manchester Pike and Bradyville, ultimately moving onto Manchester, thus forcing Bragg to recall his forces to Tullahoma. If Union forces could capture Manchester and force Bragg to abandon the Shelbyville-Wartrace line, they could also make his Tullahoma base untenable with another flanking move, thereby cutting Bragg off from his main supply base at Chattanooga. Hoover's Gap was critical for the success of this plan!

The task of capturing Manchester was assigned to Corps commanders George H. Thomas and Alexander M. McCook, both seasoned veterans of war. Before dawn on the 24th, Colonel John T. Wilder's brigade moved out in advance of Thomas' corps. A slow drizzling rain turned the roads into quagmires. This rain continued for the next 11 days, and was described by Rosecrans as "one of the most extraordinary rains ever known in Tennessee." Despite the discomfort, however, Wilder's men marched on eagerly, anxious to try their new Spencer repeating rifles, in what they knew would be a major encounter with the enemy. Wilder himself had arranged for the financing of these new weapons with his hometown bank in Greensburg, Indiana when the Army brass in Washington had refused to purchase them. At 10:00 a.m. Colonel Wilder and his Brigade, almost nine miles ahead of the rest of their division, reached the entrance to Hoover's Gap.

The 1st Kentucky Cavalry was on duty when Wilder's sudden and unexpected advance took them completely by surprise. Confederate forces retreated after a valiant fight through the seven-mile length of the gap and Wilder pushed on through, seizing the hills at the south end of Hoover's Gap, which he was determined to hold until reinforcements arrived. This was the very position that Confederate forces had planned to use for their defense. Brigadier General William B. Bate rushed his Confederates to the front and for over an hour they gallantly attacked Wilder's entrenched, but badly outnumbered, brigade.

Company E, of the 72nd Indiana overran its position and while returning to the battle line, and being fired upon by Confederates, came across 3 small children, 2 girls and a boy, trying to find their way out of the woods amid the shower of bullets. The firing suddenly stopped. Sgt. Wilhite of the 72nd dismounted, helped them over a fence and headed them toward a house out of range of the battle. The fighting then resumed and Company E went about its business of fighting its way back to the brigade.

The battle continued throughout the day, with charge after charge of brave Southern men being repulsed by a storm of Yankee bullets from their new "seven-shooters." Bate's Tennesseans staggered but filled their ranks and came on time and time again only to fall back in a hail of bullets. General Bate reorganized his men, brought up his reserves, and together with Bushrod Johnson's newly arrived brigade, began preparations for a new attack on Wilder's position. In the meantime, Wilder was ordered to withdraw immediately, but refused and steadfastly maintained that he could hold his position and would take responsibility for the consequences, even under the threat of arrest. He was accurate in this assessment and the last attack of the day was easily repulsed. By 7:00 p.m. Union reinforcements had arrived and on June 26th Confederate forces withdrew toward Tullahoma. The 1,500 Spencer repeating rifles were capable of firing 14 rounds per minute and proved to be the difference between Union forces and the numerically superior Confederates. General Thomas declared following the day's battle that he had not expected to capture the gap for three days and that henceforth Wilder's men would be known as the "Lightning Brigade." Over two hundred, or nearly one fourth of the Confederate forces were killed or wounded at Hoover's Gap while Wilder's Brigade suffered only fifty-one casualties. General Bate later commented that judging from the fire power of the Union force, he thought he was outnumbered five to one. It may very well be that this first encounter with repeating rifles at Hoover's Gap was the beginning of the expression which traveled around the Confederate army for the remainder of the war: that the "Yankees could load on Sunday and shoot all the rest of the week."

The Battle at Hoover's Gap was the beginning of what was to be known as the ill-fated Tullahoma campaign. It was the first battle to see the use of repeater rifles. The loss of Hoover's Gap resulted in the loss of Middle Tennessee, a blow from which the South would never recover, and ultimately set the stage for the Atlanta Campaign and Sherman's March to the Sea one year later. It was also the beginning of the end of two military careers - Bragg and Rosecrans. Although overshadowed by the Battles of Vicksburg and Gettysburg, the importance and impact of those eleven rainy days in Tennessee cannot be denied. The key players - what happened to them?

General Braxton Bragg - Although there was much discontent among Confederate army leaders and Bragg having lost much of the respect of his men, he never-the-less had the support of President Jefferson Davis and remained in charge of the Army of Tennessee for another year. After victory at Chickamauga in September, the loss in November at Chattanooga/Lookout Mountain resulted in the loss of Tennessee and retreat to Georgia, where he was finally replaced by General Joseph E. Johnston.

General William Starke Rosecrans - Rosecrans' embarrassing defeat at Chickamauga in September and the demoralizing retreat to Chattanooga resulted in his being replaced by George H. Thomas, the "Rock of Chickamauga," thus ending his military career.

Lt. Col. John T. Wilder - After the war, Wilder returned home to Greensburg, Indiana. In 1866, he relocated his family to Chattanooga, where several members of the "Lightning Brigade" followed. He founded the Roane Iron Company and was a very successful businessman. He worked hard at healing the war wounds of the city and was elected mayor in 1871. An ex-Confederate soldier wrote of him: "It was deemed appropriate that Wilder should be elected mayor of the free choice of the people of Chattanooga to show that no bitterness engendered by war remains in our hearts. In 1876, running as a Republican, he lost a bid to Congress, but was appointed Post Master the next year by incoming President Rutherford B. Hayes. It was said of Wilder: "He has lived many years among a people whom he once fought with all his dash and vim, and has not yet received one uncivil or unkind word from any man in the South, and what is more, he has a host of friends among them." Wilder was appointed Chairman of the Chickamauga National Park Commission and an 85 foot tower in his honor was dedicated on the 40th anniversary of the battle in 1903. Wilder died in 1917.

Life and Times of James Robert Mathes

Families leaving the Old Country and coming to America in the 1600s and 1700s met with hard times. They came over with not much more than the clothes on their backs. Children of these immigrants learned early in life that they had to work hard to survive in the new country of The United States of America. These new patriots had to fight to gain their independence and their great grandchildren three generations later had to fight to keep their independence. Everyone had to work hard to get what they had and it seems the Mathes family was no exception. They were hard workers from the time of Alexander Mathes, a blacksmith in Ireland, even to James Robert Mathes, a soldier, a farmer, a husband, a father, a craftsman, a county magistrate and a churchman. Into these times James Robert Mathes was born.

James Robert Mathes was one of thirteen children born to James Harrison and Harriet Allen Mathes. They lived and raised their children in Milton, Tennessee, the northeastern part of Rutherford County, on property at the corner of Bradley Creek Road (northeast side) and Milton Pike (north side). Their children were: Arbelles born 1836, married A. C. Hight; Becky born 1838, died at age seven; James Robert born January 29, 1840, married Sarah Ann Lester; Eli Allen born 1842, married Mary Grimmet, after her death married Mrs. Mollie Vaught; William Garrison born 1844, married Fannie Overall; Susan born 1845, never married; Fannie born 1848, married Albert Overall; G. T. (Jim) born 1850, married Mollie Martin, after her death married Mrs. Florence Marler; Johnny born 1852, died at the age of four; Sidney Johnston born 1854, married Nannie Bass; Sarah Victoria born 1856, married Randolph Bass; Lucy born 1857, married Jesse Carter; Berry born 1859, never married.

Although we know nothing of his childhood, we know James Robert Mathes was well educated because we have some beautifully written letters sent to his parents, brothers, and sisters while serving the Confederacy. He enlisted in the State Militia April 30, 1861. Following is his Civil War record in the Confederate Army as related many years later to his daughter, Bettie Mathes.

"Enlisted in the State Militia April 30th 1861 at Milton, Tennessee in Company I Eighteenth Tennessee Infantry, sworn into service at Murfreesboro May 20 following, under Captain A. J. Carden, Colonel J. B. Palmer, and General Simon B. Buckner. Went into camp at Camp Trousdale and was in training until February 1862. Went from there to Fort Donelson and was in battle there February 14-15 and surrendered the 16th. As a prisoner was carried to Camp Butler, Illinois where I remained until September 1862 when I was sent to Vicksburg, Mississippi and exchanged. I then went to Jackson Mississippi, where the regiment was reorganized under officers Captain Zack Williams and Colonel J. B. Palmer. From Jackson I went to Murfreesboro, Tennessee where I was placed in Breckenridge's Division. I was engaged in battle here on January 2, 1863 after which we retreated south. The next battle in which we were engaged was at Chickamauga, September 19 and 20 1863 where on the afternoon of the 20th I was wounded and sent to hospital where I remained for about three months. I returned to the Army at Dalton Georgia December 12, 1863 and was in Joe Johnston's retreat back to Atlanta. We were engaged in several skirmishes and small battles on the way back and finally I was captured in front of Atlanta, July 30, 1864. I was started north for prison but made my escape by jumping from train. I made my way back home and spent two weeks and then started back south with Dabell's Brigade, was captured again at Readyville, Tennessee, sent to Murfreesboro, put in prison, staid there two weeks and again made my escape. I then got up twelve recruits of eighteen year old boys and went back South unarmed with Captain Tom Hill of Carters Scouts, met Hood's army at Gadsden Alabama, came back with Forest's Cavalry to Franklin, Tennessee, took part in the battle there then went to Nashville, retreated southward and remained with Forest until close of war. I was paroled at Gainsville, Alabama and came home May 24, 1865."

This family sent two sons into battle to fight for their beliefs, James Robert and William Garrison. I was told that the Mathes family at home in Milton flew a signal from the window of the second floor of the house so James Robert and W. G. would know when it was safe to come home. A certain color cloth meant that it was safe to come home and another color of cloth meant danger. The Battle of Milton was fought about two miles from the Mathes home. Although the folks at home were in danger of being in the line of fire during the battle, the farm and its family withstood the ravages of war. The Mathes family came out of the war much better than many Southern families. Both sons came home safely and lived long lives. W. G. lived to be approximately 90 years of age.

Following are excerpts from letters received by the Mathes and Lester families during the Civil war which tells of some of the hardships for both families and soldiers. Feelings and beliefs were reflected in their letters as well as their being homesick but they kept encouraging the homefolks to not give up although times were hard. The letters are printed as near as to the way they were written as could best be interpreted. Spelling and usage of words are as in the written letters. The letters are well preserved considering they have not been touched in a hundred years.

"... I am doing well at this time. I have just got through with my dinner and the companies arise very calm at this time and not much of anything going on. I haven't got any message of importance to write to you only to inform you that the most of our company is sick & that isn't much surprise. I will assure you that, not much nervous. I am much better pleased with my trip than I anticipated. I am getting pretty well used to hardships and most anything else you might think of. There is a great deal of sickness in camp. I have escaped so far, its not too late for me yet. . . "

Sal & Sue you have no idea how well I would like to have been at Salem to day & from there to your house for dinner. I think that I could enjoy myself finely with you all. . . . The 20 of May will soon be here & then I think I will come home & stay a month or too if not longer. I don't know how that will turn out yet our country is in a gloomy condition at this time. We once lived in a happy & prosperous land but that time is past. Now we live in a unfriendly world at this day & time."

Ever Loved Parents, Brothers, & Sisters

Words cannot express the pleasure I have in even writing to you. I am out on an old oak log where I often resort to to meditate and think of home and of home folks. It is needless for me to tell you of the hard time we had coming out of middle Tennessee. Suffice it to say we got out safe. We was then disbanded for twenty days in which I enjoyed myself. Finely I went to Aunt Polly's and from there I branched out all over the country. Cousin Willie Orr was with me, Newton and Gran Allen. I was treated by the old folks as if I was one of their own children and by the girls as if I was their brother. Gars was well a few days ago, he is in South Carolina, all was well the last I heard from him. Newton and Gran started to South Carolina a few days ago, they were both well and in fine spirits. Cap Mathes has resigned and gone home. Houston is also at home. Bill was not killed in Tennessee but was badly wounded, he has got home. Arch your Mothers folks, are all well. They want to see you very bad Cousin Addie and afraid are both grown. They gave me a party while I was down there. I enjoyed myself well. Brady was well when last heard from. I wrote him a letter a few days ago, he wants to hear from you. He thinks that you are dead. You can write to him by flag of truce, he is at Shelby Springs Hospital Alabama. Susan you and Fanny and Sally must be good girls and not mess about too much. Fanny you and Sally must not laugh so loud, they can hear you to Mr. Weatherlys. Jim you must have me a pair of boots by the time I get in there. Johnson you must be a good boy, you and Berry must work and let Pa rest. Lucy you must knit me a pair of gloves by the time I come. Tell Pete he must learn to dance by the time I come and bring him that fiddle. Tell the baby for me. Give Aunt Anns folks my best love. Tell Aunt Polly to cook me a mess of cabbage and I will come over and get it. You must stand firm, we are bound to have our independence if we have to put the negroes in the service, write every chance to your unworthy boy.

Tis hard to tell which way we will go when we leave this place. I am in hopes we will go into Ky. That move would suit me finely. I must close, tis raining this evening. Kind Parents

I seat myself to drop you a few lines to console you in your troubles as me as I can for I know that you are troubled. . . . these lines leaves us all well. I hope things find you enjoying some blessing. I have but little news to write, none than you know so fast. We have been very successful at Vicksburg. Our loss is only six thousand. The yankees loss the rise of forty thousand. I understand some of the people in our country is very low. . . . Just hold up your heads a while longer and then we will be all wright. Pay no attention to what you hear union people say. If they were to succeed in taking Vicksburg that would only prolong the war. We will have our independence if it cost every life in the South. I never will live under the abolition government. I wish I could come home to see you . . . Arch and all are at Beech Grove. Arch said all might be with me one night this week. Mother wanted to know if we received things she sent to us. We received everything except the letter you sent by Cass Pa. I do not expect to come home unless we come down in that country until the war ends for it is impossible to get a furlough and I never will come no other way. If I had a chance I would send you some paper and envelopes. Write soon and give me all the news. Hoping that I will hear from you soon. I will quit.

Dear Father

I address you this mornning from the fortifications around Murfreesboro. General Dibrell was attacked at Readville yesterday morning and there was about one hundred of his command captured. Myself, William Allen and William Arnold was among the captured and several others that I will not mention. Al and Green believe mad their way out. William Allen was wounded slightly with a sabre. I would like very much to have some money and a blanket as I lost my blanket though I saved my clothing. You or Arch one come down as we wont leave here until the past of the week. Mother never rest one minute uneasiness about me. I am as lucky as a dog. I think I will be at home in a short time. At least I will not remain in a prison. Arch bring your jeans coat as it look more like a soldier's coat than my jacket. Give my love to all the children. I believe I will say nothing more. I remain ever your Rebel son.

James R. Mathes*

Although Bob Mathes (sometimes known as Squire Bob Mathes) did not affiliate with any church until past middle age, he probably attended Bradley's Creek Baptist Church where he met his wife, Sarah Ann Lester (born September 24, 1841, and daughter of Harrison and Adeline Jarman Lester) who was an active member of the Church and whose grandfather, Presley Lester, helped organize and pastor this Church.

Bob & Sarah Ann married December 23, 1868. Trying to tie the broken threads of his life, these two set out in those troubled reconstruction days to make a home and raise a family. This, Bob & Sarah Ann (sometimes called Sallie) Mathes did on property in the 17th district of Wilson County, Tennessee, on the banks of Bradley Creek. Sarah Ann inherited this property from her parents and they together operated the farm until their deaths. Five healthy children were born to this couple, but their health was short lived except for one. Scarlet fever hit the young family which killed James Harrison at the age of 5. Then infantile paralysis invaded the family when Bennie (Benjamin) was 5 years old. This left him blind and helpless until he was 40 years of age when he died. Bob's and Sarah Ann's grandchildren often wondered how these two managed to raise Bennie considering his helplessness, but where there's love, there's strength to carry on. Also Bettie, age 2, had infantile paralysis and never walked a day after that. Baby sister, Harriet, died at the age of 6. The oldest daughter, Nannie (my grandmother) lived a healthy and normal life, married John W. Clemmons and raised three healthy children. Nannie was 5 years older than Bettie and they both lived to be 75 years of age.

Bob and Sarah Ann were well educated and saw to it that their daughters were educated. Nannie and Bettie were remarkable girls. Nannie attended the Milton Academy and her report cards showed she made very high marks in school. Of course Bettie could not attend school and I have been told that when Nannie came home from school, she taught Bettie what she had learned that day. That and along with the help of her parents, Bettie became a well educated girl. As Bettie became older, she began ordering books through the mail on all subjects, math, geography, history, etc.; and read law from her father's law books, as well as many other books. But much of her time was spent studying The Holy Bible from which she became quite a scholar.

Also Bob Mathes was a good craftsman of wood. He made most of the furniture for his house. Three of his great grandchildren have pieces of furniture which he made. They are beautiful pieces, simple lines and made mostly of walnut and poplar. These pieces were made to be used and this they have been for four generations.

Bob Mathes had law books which he used as reference while serving in the county government. The Lebanon Democrat wrote that "James R. Mathes represented the 17th district in the county court of Wilson County for 30 years, voluntarily retiring in 1918. During his long service in the county's legislative body, Squire Mathes is said never to have made a speech but he gave careful consideration to all matters of business and was an unusually useful public servant."

Although Bob & Sarah Ann owned their farm and they educated their daughters, money was hard to come by. Family papers show that James R. Mathes often borrowed money from family and neighbors and receipts show he always paid his debts. He was also helpful to his family and neighbors by loaning them money whenever it was needed. Tax receipts of Wilson County, Tennessee, show he always paid his taxes.

As already mentioned, Bob Mathes, never was affiliated with a church until past middle age. His grandchildren were told that he was baptized in Bradley Creek at the same time his invalid daughter, Bettie, was baptized which was September 21, 1902. He became a devoted church worker and served as a deacon for over 30 years in Bradley's Creek Baptist Church. Church records show that he was the first deacon to be ordained by that Church.

As Bob Mathes' marriage began on December 23, 1868, it also ended on December 23, 1924, when Sarah Ann died. For fifty-six years this wife and husband lived together and as their daughter, Bettie, wrote "... it is precious to know that they will meet again."

Bob Mathes lived to see his three grandchildren, James Preston Clemmons, Lila Grace Clemmons Craddock, William Harrison Clemmons, and three great grandchildren, William Preston Clemmons, Nancy Evelyn Craddock Jackson and Edna Rhea Craddock Vaughn. He was a tall man, well over six feet, big built, and his back was always straight. His walking stick is 46 inches long which proves he was a tall man. I remember that every night he would eat a cake of yeast to give him iron for his body and keep him well. I never knew or heard of his being sick. However I understand that his

Civil War injury in the hip always bothered him. It is said that perhaps one reason for Bob Mathes' long life was that his family of children with health problems needed him. Even in his old age, he and his invalid daughter, Bettie, took care of each other, his operating the family farm and Bettie doing the cooking and housework from her wheel chair.

"One of the most remarkable lives that Wilson County has known ended June 29, 1934 when James Robert Mathes died at his home in the 17th district at the age of 94." (The Lebanon Democrat)

STONES RIVER NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD

The Battle of Stones River took place over a three day period from 31 December 1862 to 2 January 1863. It occurred along the Nashville-Chattanooga rail lines three miles northwest of Murfreesboro. The strategic objective of the Union forces was to drive a wedge in the Southern lines by gaining access to the rail lines that ran Southeast through Tennessee and eventually down into Georgia. The field of troops on this battleground between the Union and Confederate forces totalled some 81,000 men, and this encounter is regarded as one of the bloodiest in the Western Campaign as the casualties totalled some 13,249 Union troops and an additional 10,266 Confederate troops who died in this three day battle.

The Confederate forces buried their dead, if they could, along what is today US Hwy 231 and the railroad just south of Murfreesboro. This is where part of their main encampment existed. It is located today between Samsonite Boulevard and the railroad tracks. This cemetery was disinterred in the late 1880's and moved to Evergreen Cemetery in Murfreesboro. There are only about 200 of these troops identified.

For the Union dead, many were first taken to the Union University Hospital on East Main Street in Murfreesboro where there was already a burial ground established for the Union Troops behind the hospital. Today this location is just behind Central Middle School on their football playing field. Approximately around a 1,000 were first buried in this location. In addition approximately 500 Union troops were buried in the Old City Cemetery on E. Vine Street, and almost as many were buried in another cemetery on Sevier Street on the main road to Woodbury. There are also those who are listed as falling and buried in various places along the main battlefield just off Old Nashville Highway.

When the Stones River National Battlefield was established in 1865, the main job of the chaplains was to establish a common burial grounds . When all of fallen Union soldiers were reburied in the National Cemetery, the total for the Murfreesboro area came to around 3,000. During the fall and winter of 1865-1866, the Union troops extended their range of gathering up their fallen comrades. These patrols went to the skirmishes of Hoover's Gap, Liberty Gap, Guy's Gap and all points of an 80-90 mile radius of Murfreesboro, and disinterred the bodies and transported them back to Stones River. They also went as far westward as LaVergne, Lebanon, Columbia, Decherd, Fayetteville, and other points. In addition there were Union soldiers who died in the Murfreesboro and extended area during the rest of the war, and these soldiers were often reburied at Stones River.

I wish to thank Ms Bettie Cook and Mary Ann Peckham of the Stones River National Battlefield for the help they gave in compiling the information about the cemetery.
